Dear Sirk: We have seen your TABLEAUX VIVANTS, and desire thus publicly to acknowledge our sense of their great classic beauty, and of their perfection as embodiments and representations of the great world-renowneed master-pieces of art.
Vill you, Sir, receive from us, artists residing in New York, a complimentary benefit as a slight testimental of graditude for the pleasure you have given us by your new manifestations of the eternal beauty of those works, by your successful effort to advance and elevate the tasts for the divine labour of the publicr, the eculytor and the poet?

We will most cordially exercise what influence we may have to render such benefit as beneficial to you as your representations have been delightful to us; and, confident of the public tasts and love of art, we cannot for a moment doubt that the cooperation of nearly all our citizens will be given to us, and prove to you how well we can appreciate those endeavors of yours to popularities and extend more widely the influence and knowl; edge of inspired art.

AMERICAN LIFE.

MRS. CAROLINE LEE HENTZ. Author of "Ernest Linwood," "Annt Patty's Scrap Bag," "Planter's Northern Bride," "Linda," "Rena," etc.
Complete in one large volume, bound in cloth, for $1.25; or in two volumes, paper cover, for $1.

This work will be found, on perusal, by all to be one of the most exciting interesting and popular works that has ever em, anated from the American Press. It is written in a charming style, and will impart to all a thrill of deep and exquisite pleasure. It is a work which the oldest and the youngest may slike read with profit. It abounds with the most beautiful scenic descriptions, and displays an intimate acquaintance with all phases of human character-all the characters being exceedingly well drawn. It is a delightful book, full of incidents, ofteningly well drawn. It is a designation book that of incomes, other times bold and startling, and describes the warm feelings of the Southerner in glowing colors. Indeed, all Mrs. Henta's sixties aptly describe Southern life, and are highly moral in their ap-plication. In this field Mrs. Henta wields a keen sixkle, and harvests a rich and abundant crop. It will be found, in plot, incident and management, to be a superior work. In the whole range of elegant moral fiction, there cannot be found anything of more inestimable value, or superior to this work, and it is a gem that will well repay a careful perusal. The Publisher feels assured that it will give entire satisfaction to all readers, en courage good taste and good morals, and while away many leisure hours with great pleasure and profit, and be recommended to others by all that peruse it. Published and for sale by T. B. PETERSON.
